Activities and Rationale:

List, explain, and provide a rationale for all activities in which you participated. Avoid descriptions such as "because it needed to be done;" rather, establish the real motivation for and/or goal of the activity.

Example: Researched history of company for inclusion in annual report. This history will be a part of the company's efforts to rebrand its identity and purpose with stakeholders who might be nervous about the current economic news.

Problems and Resolution:

Report any problems affecting the outcome of your activities and your plan for resolving the problems.

Example: The company's intranet was down, making it impossible to research early documents associated with the company. Because I could not access the early documents online, I visited the company's library archive to view print copies.
