Divisible is an award-winning documentary that focuses on the history and current impact of redlining in the United States, focusing on the specific case of Omaha, Nebraska to show how this practice continually affects and harms people and cities across the nation. The film uses a collection of interviews with individuals who are experts on the topic, either through their profession, their lived experiences, or both.

Following the film, a panel featuring three Divisible Governing Board Members will provide insights and lead a thought-provoking discussion on the themes explored in the documentary.

Audience members will be able to sign up for a free tour of North Omaha.
