THE TEN COMMANDMENTS: IMPOSING RELIGION OR HONORING HISTORY?

March 27, 2026
2:30 P.M. to 3:30 P.M.

Tri-Faith Initiative
13136 Faith Plaza, Omaha NE

A dozen states are considering or have already enacted legislation that would mandate display of the Ten Commandments in public schools. The Baptist Joint Committee for Religious Liberty has submitted amicus briefs in two cases in which these laws have been appealed, in Louisiana and Arkansas. In this conversation, we will consider the nature of the Ten Commandments as a religious text and its relation to the Establishment Clause in the U.S. Constitution.

Rabbi David Segal

As policy counsel for Baptist Joint Committee for Religious Liberty (BJC), Rabbi Segal oversees BJC's national, state, and local advocacy agenda and supports litigation efforts on church/state separation and religious freedom. Segal has worked as a policy advocate, community organizer, congregational rabbi, and federal judicial clerk.

This event is sponsored by the Goldstein Center for Human Rights, UNO Religious Studies and the Brooks Lecture Fund, and the Tri-Faith Initiative
