

Sikh Teachings and Interreligious Dialogue in a Time of Pandemic

APRIL 16, 2020 | 12 P.M. | ONLINE- REGISTER FOR ACCESS

How do we care for ourselves and others in the midst of a pandemic? Many of us draw on religious or philosophical teachings in moments of crisis -- and there's always more to learn from wisdom traditions. It's also clear that, in our interconnected world, interreligious dialogue and action feel more urgent than ever.

Dr. Simran Jeet Singh will draw on his experiences as a member of the Sikh religious tradition and an interreligious activist, as well as his study of the Sikh tradition, to shed light on Sikh teachings about God's love, hospitality, care for others and the self, and doing justice even in difficult times. In turn, these teachings also add new ideas and nuance to dialogue among people of diverse religious affiliations, including those with no formal affiliation.

REGISTER HERE: <http://tiny.cc/sikhteachings>

FOR MORE INFORMATION:

Angela Brown | 402.554.4067 | angelambrown@unomaha.edu

This lecture is sponsored by the Goldstein Family Community Chair in Human Rights, the University Committee for the Advancement of Teaching, the Goldstein Center for Human Rights, the UNO Department of Religious Studies, and the Tri-Faith Initiative.

GOLDSTEIN FAMILY COMMUNITY CHAIR IN HUMAN RIGHTS

GOLDSTEIN CENTER FOR HUMAN RIGHTS

RELIGIOUS STUDIES

