

Peace and Prosperity:

What Did the Romans Ever Do for Their Subjects?

The Romans were brutal conquerors, but it's usually accepted that they brought peace and prosperity to the provinces. Though some evidence suggests the early Empire experienced economic growth, the nature and extent of that growth remains quite hazy. In his talk, Professor David Hollander (Iowa State University) asks who actually shared in the Imperial "peace dividend."

Thurs 10/27
CEC 230-31

6:30-7:30 pm
Questions after

Light refreshments will be served

Contact Dr. Jeanne Reames (mreames@unomaha.edu) for parking information

Sponsored by the Dean of Arts and Sciences; organized by Ancient Mediterranean Studies