

Econ 8666/4660: International Economic Development
Dr. Zhigang Feng

This course introduces theories of economic development and growth and their applications. It deals with economic problems facing the developing countries. It analyzes domestic economic issues, such as the level and the growth rate of per capita GDP, income distribution, population, unemployment, urbanization, education, and fiscal and financial policies, as well as international economic issues, such as trade, foreign investment and foreign debt. The recent financial crisis, debt crisis, and economic recovery will be discussed.