“CPAR’s formal relationship with the U.S. Census Bureau gives it first-hand knowledge about the decennial census and ongoing survey efforts. CPAR helps Nebraskans learn about the latest population trends and new data products, provides engagement opportunities, and generates statewide connections/collaborations between elected officials, planners, educators, the business community, media, policymakers, and others. We are so thankful for their creative, top quality, and team approach while serving as a key driver in the 2020 Census leading Nebraska to the 4th best self-response in the country.”

It's not just the data CPAR provides, but Director Dr. Josie Schafer's delivery and rapport with attendees that inspires us all to take a good, hard look and do what we can to do better. Fortunately, in the Central Region for the 6 Regions, One Nebraska initiative, the consensus was to tackle housing, childcare, and workforce. While all these issues are not easily remedied, progress can be measured thanks to the data provided by CPAR. We are very fortunate as a Nebraska Initiative and an entire state to have Dr. Schafer and her team working to bring us information to improve the lives of all.
