Do You Have The CourAGE to Care?

Emily Drummy

University of Nebraska at Omaha
Gerontology, Interior Design, Graduate Certificate

My today started when I became an advocate for elderly and disabled people within the realm of interior design. After helping prepare a home for my family member with Lou Gehrig's disease, it became clear to me that even ADA compliant buildings are not accessible to all people. The Gerontology, Interior Design graduate certificate program from the University of Nebraska at Omaha allowed me to combine my desire to serve the aging community with my passion for interior design. The program enabled me to critically think about accessibility issues. When I graduate, I'm confident I'll not only be a more desirable candidate to architecture and design firms, but I'll also be well-equipped to serve aging and disabled populations, and that's what's most important.
