

Dawn O. Braithwaite, Ph.D. is a Willa Cather Professor Emerita of Communication at University of Nebraska-Lincoln. She studies communication of family and personal relationships, discourse dependent families, and rituals in stepfamilies, voluntary kin relationships, and family kinkeeping. She has published six books in 14 editions and over 160 articles and chapters. She is a Past President and Distinguished Scholar of the National Communication Association and Western States Communication Association. She received NCA's Brommel Family Communication Award and Becker Service Award, UNL's campus James O'Hanlon Academic Leader Award, and UNL's campus Dean's Award for Excellence in Graduate Education. She authors the "Communication Matters" blog for Psychology Today:

<https://www.psychologytoday.com/us/blog/communication-matters>