Community Engagement Grew icy

The writer is dean emeritus of the University of

BY ROBERT'S RUNYON
Nebulaa Humanities Council
Executive Director
Jane Baynor Hood, Lourdes

The skills are truly "developed" in the community. Not by community members, but by creative communities that have been working on service and education for many years.

The role of the community is to expand and chart the future of UNO. Community members are responsible for students to learn and practice these skills, to be part of the educational process, and to help ensure the safety and protection of children. Such visits are extremely necessary in order to foster their growth and development.

Dear Nebraska, Hal Daball, I want people to love the community, to see it as a place where they can call home.