

Study this summer in

NICARAGUA

Spanish Language & Public Health

Join students from UNK, UNMC, UNO and UNL on this University of Nebraska study abroad program in Nicaragua summer 2018! This interdisciplinary course and study abroad experience will allow you to both develop Spanish language skills and explore public health in the Nicaraguan context. This dual-site trip will begin by providing you with two weeks of level-specific language instruction at the Centro de Idiomas at UNAN-León. During your time in this beautiful, colonial city, you will also participate in afternoon cultural activities and public health discussions. Enjoy a weekend excursion to explore the city of Granada, Lake Nicaragua and Masaya Volcano. After two weeks of language preparation, you'll travel to Estelí, a tranquil city in Nicaragua's northern highlands. En route, you will swim and relax at the scenic Laguna de Apoyo, a volcanic crater lake. Finally, in Estelí you'll join Aspire Global Health, a U.S.-based global non-profit organization, to implement a public health project in the rural areas surrounding Estelí.
