National Student Employment Week (NSEW) is recognized by the National Student Employment Association (NSEA) annually during the second week of April. This year NSEW was April 10th-16th, 2022. The week was full of programs and events to show appreciation for our student employees and their contributions to the UNO community! The week has three main purposes:

- Appreciate and recognize our current student employees and their contributions to the UNO community
- Thank on campus employers for their part in supporting students in these critical roles for the university
- Build awareness of student employment opportunities and the importance they play on our campus

NSEW Programming

Walk Up Donuts and Coffee Events
These appreciation events were hosted in two locations over two days. Students and other guests could stop by to be recognized or learn more about employment opportunities on campus.

Employer Recognition
A recognition idea list was created and emailed out to supervisors of student employees. Supervisors were encouraged to do something to recognize their student employees some time during the week. The treat basket to the right was one of the many ways that employers showed their appreciation.

Other Banquet Highlights
Jackson Davis, Junior Communication Studies Major, Student Ambassador, and MSE Intern gave the keynote address to talk about his experiences as a student employee and how it has positively impacted his career-readiness. Chancellor Li was in attendance and gave a welcome address, and took photos with award winners and guests.
