

Considering A Medical Withdrawal?

Here are some steps that might help you as you determine if you would submit a request for a medical withdrawal:

1. Contact the university about your interest in applying for a medical withdrawal.
 - a. Email medicalwithdrawals@unomaha.edu to talk with a member of the Student Outreach and Support Team about the procedure for applying for medical withdrawal.
2. Complete the Medical Withdrawal Request Form and be sure to attach the following documentation:
 - a. A written personal statement that explains the general medical condition and its impact on the student's ability to perform academically. This should identify when the medical condition began and explain its impact on your coursework. Also explain any steps you have taken to address the medical condition such as seeking treatment or discussing concerns with instructors or advisors.
 - b. Documentation from a licensed healthcare provider consisting of a letter on clinic letterhead with the provider's full name, credentials and signature, that explains:
 - i. The date of onset of illness, injury, or condition
 - ii. Why the student's medical condition will interfere or has already interfered with the student's performance
 - iii. The dates the student was or will be under professional care or receiving treatment
 - iv. Medical condition treated
 - v. The potential health or clinical consequences if a medical withdrawal is not granted
3. Consult with the Office of Financial Support & Scholarships.
 - a. Call the Office of Financial Support & Scholarships if you have concerns about the impact of medically withdrawing on financial aid or scholarships.
4. Arrange a meeting with an academic advisor on MavCONNECT to discuss withdrawal and any barriers to successful completion.
